

Ties To The Land Workshop – Your Land’s Future

You have invested time, energy and money into turning your woodlands into a special place, whether it is for hunting or other outdoor activities, a get away with your family, or to grow timber as an investment. While you enjoy the woods now, have you ever thought about who might enjoy it in the future?

Perhaps your vision includes passing the land to your successors whether they are your children, grandchildren, or others. Many woodland owners haven’t thought much past, “Hopefully my heirs will be interested enough to want to carry on what I have started.” If this dream is important to you, it will take some effort on your part to make it come true. Start now by attending this workshop.

Ties To The Land workshop focuses on ways to maintain family ties to the land from generation to generation by creating a succession plan. Communication may be the difference between an estate plan, which directs the transfer of assets, and a succession plan that helps transfer, from one generation to the next, the vision, the passion and the skills needed to be stewards of the land. It is the first step to creating an estate plan. This workshop is a mix of presentations and practical sharing exercises to help families develop techniques needed to address these issues. Registrants will receive a copy of the Ties to the Land workbook and additional resources designed to help families talk to each other about the future of their woodlands. Generations of families are encouraged to attend the workshop together.

2012 Workshop Schedule
